Giving them the right attitude

In the modern educational scenario with increasing competition, technological advancements, and societal expectations, students often find themselves struggling to cope. Many of them are reluctant to share their problems with friends, relatives and teachers due to fear of judgement, lack of confidence in others, fear of rejection, low self-esteem and shyness.

Schools play a pivotal role in nurturing emotional intelligence and emotional openness among students by-

1. Creating a Supportive and Inclusive environment where children feel safe, valued and accepted.

2. Social-emotional learning (SEL) programs can be incorporated in lesson plans to create a positive and collaborative learning process. Emotional intelligence (EQ) helps students deal with stress, handle pressure from peer groups, teachers and parents.

3. Allow students to collaborate, agree and disagree respectfully and avoid fights and quarrelling. Discuss the importance of empathy and gratitude. Reframe pessimist attitude and empower positive thoughts. Encourage team games, extracurricular activities like music, dance, theatre, art, club activities, camps etc.
